Clause 1 of this Bill sets out the short title.

Clause 2 updates and expands the definitions in the Act. It clarifies terms such as “organisations for persons with disabilities” and introduces new definitions for “accessibility”, “care provider”, and “service animal”. This ensures the Act reflects contemporary concepts and practices, particularly in relation to accessibility and support for persons with disabilities.

Clause 3 makes a minor textual amendment to section 10(1)(d)(iii).

Clause 4 of this Bill amends section 14 of the Act to strengthen employment rights for persons with disabilities. It requires every employer to employ at least one qualified person with a disability for every fifty employees and mandates collaboration between the Commission and the Department of Labour. This promotes inclusion and equal opportunity in the workplace.

Clause 5 of this Bill amends section 16 of the Act to ensure that if an employee acquires a disability and cannot perform their original job, the employer must reassign them to another suitable position, in accordance with relevant laws. This protects the employment security of persons who become disabled while employed.

Clause 6 of this Bill repeals and replaces section 17 of the Act requiring the Department of Labour, in conjunction with the Commission, to maintain up-to-date records of persons with disabilities and their skills for job placement. This facilitates better employment matching and opportunities.

Clause 7 of this Bill provides for the protection of persons with disabilities from abuse, including physical, sexual, psychological, emotional, and economic abuse. It defines these forms of abuse.

Clause 8 of this Bill mandates that public building plans comply with accessibility standards approved by the Commission, and occupancy certificates will only be issued upon proof of compliance. This ensures physical accessibility in public infrastructure.

Clause 9 of this Bill clarifies that persons with disabilities must not only have access to, but also be able to effectively use, services and facilities.

Clause 10 of this Bill introduces a penalty for parking in spaces designated for persons with disabilities, imposing a fine of two hundred and fifty dollars to reinforce respect for accessible parking.

Clause 11 of this Bill amends section 23 of the Act to ensure that persons with disabilities who use Service Animals are permitted to do so in public places, public services, and rented or leased properties. It also requires entities with “no pets” policies to accommodate Service Animals.

Clause 16 amends section 32 of the Act, which requires not only the promotion but also the assurance of rights and opportunities for persons with disabilities.

Clause 17 amends section 34 of the Act to remove the two-year implementation deadline for television stations to comply, making the requirement ongoing.

Clause 22 amends section 45 of the Act to increase the penalties for discrimination in insurance, raising the maximum fine to ten thousand dollars and the maximum imprisonment to twelve months.

Clause 23 amends section 47 of the Act to clarify that the Commission may take "action" rather than just provide a "remedy" for violations, broadening its powers.

Clause 24 prohibits parents, guardians, or next of kin from concealing or denying persons with disabilities the protections and services of the Act, with increased penalties for violations.

Clause 25 amends section 49 of the Act to clarify that regulations may address forms, fees, penalties, and remedies for violations under the Act.
